Battle of the Buildings + Energy To Care

+

The American Society for Healthcare Engineering's (ASHE) Energy to Care program and EPA's National Building Competition are complementary programs that are ideal partners for helping you track savings at your medical facilities.*

The Energy to Care program was developed by ASHE specifically for medical facilities and complements the ENERGY STAR Battle of the Buildings. By entering your facility data in one place (EPA's ENERGY STAR Portfolio Manager), you gain all of the free tools, resources, competition platforms, and awards opportunities that both programs have to offer. The Energy to Care Dashboard pulls data directly from Portfolio Manager to help your facility track energy and water savings, share reports with facility stakeholders, host competitions, and win awards from ASHE.

IF I AM ALREADY IN THE ENERGY TO CARE PROGRAM, WHY SHOULD I ALSO JOIN ENERGY STAR BATTLE OF THE BUILDINGS?

- To compare your medical facility or health system's energy reductions to other buildings types.
- To take advantage of EPA's technical resources, customizable templates to promote and publicize your participation and success, creative graphics and social media guide resources.
- To leverage the national ENERGY STAR brand, which is recognized by more than 85% of consumers.
- To support your application for ENERGY STAR Partner of the Year (must be an ENERGY STAR partner to apply).

IF I AM ALREADY PARTICIPATING IN ENERGY STAR BATTLE OF THE BUILDINGS, WHY SHOULD I ALSO JOIN ASHE'S ENERGY TO CARE PROGRAM?

- To access the Energy to Care Dashboard and website Building Blocks to track and share energy and water savings and consumption information across your health system.
- To gain the ability to win awards from ASHE based on your facility's energy savings (facilities must have at least one ASHE member to be eligible).
- To set up an Energy Reduction Leaderboard to align and track savings across your health system, ASHE chapter, or other group of facilities that you choose.
- ASHE's Energy to Care and EPA's ENERGY STAR programs work together to help you save energy, reduce costs, and challenge each other to be more efficient.
